Wednesday Educational Tour: The National Centre for Truth and Reconciliation, University of Manitoba

DESCRIPTION

The National Centre for Truth and Reconciliation, opened in 2015, is the permanent home for all statements, documents, and materials gathered by the Truth and Reconciliation Commission. Their mandate is to ensure continued preservation, education and research on Residential Schools. When you visit, you will hear about the history of Residential Schools, Survivors testimonies, the work of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission, and the National Centre for Truth and Reconciliation as it functions today. The truth contained within the records housed at the NCTR will fuel new research, understanding, learning and reconciliation for years to come and will play an essential role in healing as we move forward as a nation.
